More than 25 years after the launch of the Erasmus Programme, fostering youth mobility and developing the intercultural competencies of the younger generation remain crucial issues within Europe.

The IEREST Project meets these needs by developing, testing and disseminating an Intercultural Path (namely, a set of teaching modules) to be provided to Erasmus students before, during, and after their experience abroad, in order to encourage learning mobility and to support students in benefiting as much as possible from their international experiences in terms of personal growth and intercultural competencies.

THE INTERCULTURAL PATH

How does it work?

- Outgoing students from IEREST partner universities have the opportunity to receive intercultural support before, during and after their study abroad experience (Modules 1, 2.1, and 3).
- Exchange students moving to one of the partner institutions can also attend a module in the host university (Module 2.2).

The intercultural path will be tested in four IEREST institutions (University of Bologna, Durham University, Primorska University, University of Leuven).

Our aim is to build on the IEREST experience and create a European network of higher education institutions which collaborate to provide the intercultural path to mobile students.
